Read the texts about “gadgets” and “designer brands” and do the following exercises afterwards.

Gadgets

- Dave: I see you've still got your brick, Ken.
 Ken: My what?
 Dave: Your brick. Your 1990s mobile. Isn't it too heavy to carry?
 Ken: Ha ha, very funny. It still works fine, you know. It's not the latest model, like yours, but unlike you, I know I don't need a mobile phone that can take pictures or access the internet. I don't need to check my emails when I'm on the bus, and nor do you. No one does. Did you feel your life was empty before they invented the phone you have now? Of course you didn't.
- Dave: You're a dinosaur, Ken. Don't you think technology's a good thing?
 Ken: That depends. Some stuff's really useful, like the high tech equipment in hospitals that saves people's lives, but as for the electronic gadgets people buy in the shops these days, most of them are so unnecessary. Satnav, for example – why do I need a computer to tell me where I am when I'm driving? I can read a map. I can even stop and ask another human being.
- Dave: I find satnav very handy. It saves time.
 Ken: I bet it's never saved you more than five minutes. You love wasting your money, don't you?
- Dave: You won't want to know what I bought at the weekend, then?
 Ken: A phone that can make you breakfast?
 Dave: No, an e-book reader. It's amazing. It stores the words of hundreds of books electronically, and you can just hold it in your hands. Now I can have my whole book collection right there in front of me.
- Ken: So can I. On the bookshelves in my house.
 Dave: No, but with an e-book reader you can access any of your books at the touch of a button.
- Ken: And I can access any of my books by getting off the sofa and walking about three meters. It's not difficult, and it's a lot cheaper.
 Dave: Oh, Ken, you just don't understand.
 Ken: No, you're right, I don't.

1 Answer the questions below.

a) What do you think Dave means when he jokes that Ken’s mobile phone is a “brick”?

b) How old does Dave say Ken’s mobile is?

c) What word does Ken use to describe the electronic gadgets people buy in the shops these days?

d) What example of useful technology does Ken give?

e) What two things does Ken suggest people who are driving can do instead of using satnav?

f) Ken jokes that Dave has bought something that doesn’t really exist – what is it?

g) What did Dave really buy at the weekend?

h) What do you think Dave means when he calls Ken a ‘dinosaur’?

2 Decide whether the following statements are true (T) or false (F), or if the text doesn't say (D).

a) Dave has a mobile phone.

b) Ken would like to have a camera on his mobile.

c) Dave often travels by bus.

d) Ken can drive a car.

e) Ken doesn't believe satnav saves Dave much time.

f) Dave is unhappy with his new e-book reader.

g) Ken would like an e-book reader too.

h) Dave lives in a house, not a flat.

Designer brands aren't for me!

Although I follow fashion, I hate the phrase "must-have". If I read that Ugg boots or Prada sunglasses are 1 _____, my immediate reaction is to think, "Why must I have them?" Why should I fall for the designer's manipulative tactics, which are only intended to increase his bank balance at the expense of mine? Is that fair?

Designer brands, in general, are for people who are too insecure to trust their 2 _____. These people decide that everything at Prada must be "cool", so if you shop there, you can't go wrong.

I find it much more satisfying to pop into one of the cheap chain stores on the High Street and buy a copy of the designer's clothes for a tenth of the price. OK, you have to use your skill to find the one item of clothing in three 3 _____. But it's worth it! It's like finding a piece of gold in a river. The find gives you immense satisfaction.

Which is why, 4 _____ done by a British bank, young people with money are abandoning the designer shops and buying their clothes in chain stores, 5 _____, and in markets. This is the best news I've heard all week. It means that the young people have the confidence to trust their judgement. They are prepared to take risks to look individual and not 6 _____. That has always been my shopping philosophy. The exorbitant prices in designer shops leave me open-mouthed. Even if I had the money, I would think of all the other things I could spend it on.

1 Choose a phrase from A – I to fill in gaps 1 – 6, to complete the text. There are two phrases which you won't need.

- A second-hand shops
- B mass-produced
- C the latest "must-haves"
- D that looks great

- F best friends
- G like everyone else
- H own tastes
- I according to a survey

- C are frightened of making a mistake.

3 She thinks...

- A it's easy to find great, cheap clothes..
- B you feel good if you find good cheap clothes..
- C the clothes in high street stores are better than designer clothes.

4 According to the bank survey, rich young people...

- A now want to look different from each other.
- B are now buying more designer clothes.
- C get immense satisfaction in finding cheap clothes.

5 The writer...

- A thinks the price of designer clothes is fair.
- B thinks there are better things to spend money on.
- C would like to have money to buy designer clothes.

6 If you are left "open-mouthed" you feel...

- A very excited.
- B shocked.
- C frightened.
